STADIUM BUILT AND OWNED BY AUSTRALIAN SPORTING CLUBS

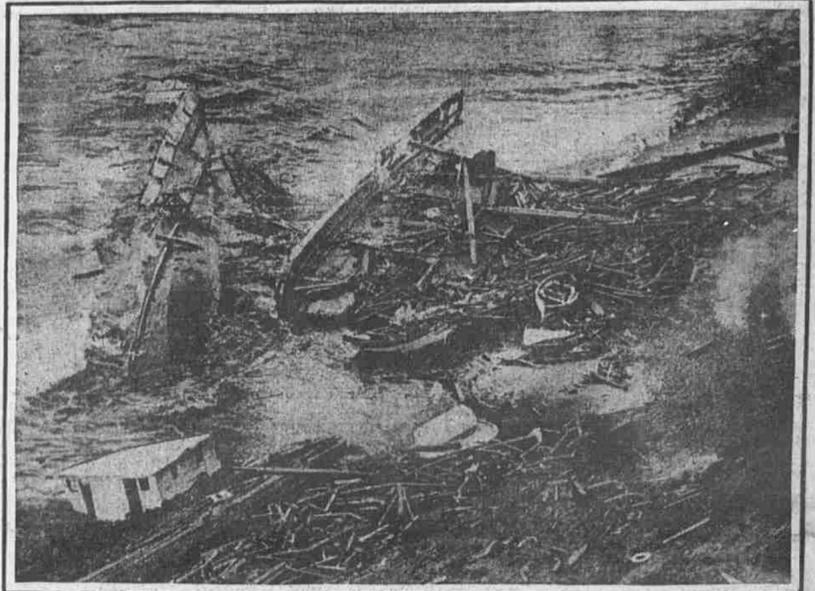

This photograph, which shows nearly 80,000 spectators, was snapped during a Rugby football game played at Sydney, New South Wales, between the Australian and New Zealand teams for the amateur championship of Australasia. This oval is particularly interesting at this time, inasmuch as Philadelphians are considering a plan to build one very much on this order. The stadium shown above was built in a natural depression, just as the proposed bowl in this city would be. It is constructed of concrete and will seat 75,000 persons. It cost about $300,000. In this oval cricket is played, as well as football, and, thanks to the method of putting soil on the field, the football matches do not hurt the cricket pitch in the least. Around the running track arc lights may be seen. Track meets and bicycle races are held in the evening.

GERMAN PEASANTS DRIVEN FROM THEIR HOMES BY THE RUSSIANS

Householders of East Prussia in their temporary homes in the fields where they had fled before the advancing forces of the Czar. The Germans assert East Prussia has suffered as much from invading armies as Belgium.

PACIFIC LINER WRECKED ON CALIFORNIA COAST

The steamship Hanalei struck Duxbury reef, near San Francisco, shortly before noon on November 23 and pounded herself to pieces in 16 hours in a terrific gale. Twenty lives were lost.

LIFE SAVERS TAKING BODY FROM WRECK

The life-saving crew from Fort Point fought in vain to get a line aboard the Hanalei. Their mortar finally exploded from a double charge.
